

RICHARD G. CONVICER

Richard G. Convicer concentrates his practice in representing clients in tax disputes before the Internal Revenue Service and the Connecticut Department of Revenue Services. He is a former trial attorney for the Office of District Counsel, IRS where he represented the IRS in court and advised examiners, appeals officers and criminal tax investigators in a variety of civil and criminal matters. He has over 25 years of experience in representing clients in federal income tax and employment tax matters before the IRS Examination Division, Appeals Division and the United States Tax Court. He has extensive experience representing clients in federal tax criminal investigations before the IRS, the Department of Justice, and the United States District Court. He has resolved many sales and income tax audits, appeals, and criminal prosecutions. He also appears frequently before the IRS Collection Division to negotiate installment agreements and, if feasible, offers in compromise. He served as adjunct professor at the University Of Hartford Graduate School Of Business teaching IRS Practice and Procedure.

In addition to taxpayer representation, Attorney Convicer has developed expertise in tax planning for businesses and individuals, including business entity planning and estate planning. He chaired the LLC Subcommittee of the Connecticut Bar Association which authored and monitored passage of the Connecticut Limited Liability Company Act. He is the co-author of Connecticut Limited Liability Companies: Forms and Practice Manual, a resource for lawyers and accountants regarding the LLC structure. Attorney Convicer has lectured extensively on issues involving limited liability companies.

Attorney Convicer received his Juris Doctor degree with honors from Boston College Law School. He earned his Masters of Law in Taxation degree from New York University School of Law. He is a Fellow of the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel (ACTEC), a professional organization whose membership is limited to attorneys who have demonstrated expertise in probate, trust, and estate planning law. He is a member of the Civil and Criminal Tax Penalties Section of the American Bar Association, the Executive Committee of the Tax Section of the Connecticut Bar Association and the Tax Section of the Massachusetts Bar Association. He has been recognized in Best Lawyers in America and has been selected by his peers as a New England SuperLawyer. He received the Federal Tax Institute of New England's 2012 achievement award for his successful dealings with the IRS and for his helping to secure the state of Connecticut's limited liability company statute. Attorney Convicer is AV Peer Review Rated by Martindale-Hubbell, its highest rating. He is a frequent speaker before attorneys, accountants, and other business and professional groups.